This rich and beautiful book surveys the field of Whistler's accomplishment, embodying an account of his methods so far as they may be made clear to the general reader.

Miss Cary's remarkable insight and rare critical abilities, combined with her unusual capacity to interpret art, even in its more elusive aspects, to the appreciative mind unskilled in the refinements of criticism, are here illustrated at their best, resulting in a volume of great distinction.

MOFFAT, YARD AND COMPANY

THE FAR HORIZON

By Lucas Malet, author of Sir Richard Calmady

"If the quality of readableness alone can give large distinction to a new work of fiction, Lucas Malet's novel, "The Far Horizon," will easily take its place as the book of the year. It is readable in no ordinary way. One does not hurry through its pages intent only on the story, but it both invites and repays leisurely attention. One reads, also, with no very distinct sense of the author's style, which is unobtrusive and free from vagaries."

PERSONAL COMPANIONSHIPS IN BOOKS

The Hohenlohe Memoirs

SUPPOSE you could sit down whenever you pleased and listen for an entire evening to the intimate conversation of a man who had been German Ambassador to France just after the Franco-Prussian War; who knew Bismarck well, and was Emperor William's right-hand man! Would you not think the privilege worth the price of this book? The Memoirs of Prince von Hohenlohe

Cloth, 8vo, with portraits, 2 vols., $6.00 net.

Bram Stoker's Henry Irving

SUPPOSE you could hear Henry Irving's closest associate tell the complete story of the great actor's life, filling the account with delightfully funny anecdotes and most interesting comments on Irving's art and experience. Mr. Bram Stoker does this as no one else possibly could, in

Personal Reminiscences of Henry Irving

In two volumes, cloth, illustrated, $7.50 net.

Dr. Hale's Tarry at Home Travels

SUPPOSE that you and Dr. Edward Everett Hale could take a leisurely journey through New England, he pointing out the places where history was made, and telling stories all the while of the men who had lived there, many of them old personal friends of his own. He does this very thing in his Tarry at Home Travels

Cloth, 8vo, richly illustrated, $2.50 net (postage 22c.).

Mrs. Ravenel's Charleston

SUPPOSE that one of the "Kings Port ladies" should step out from Owen Wister's "Lady Baltimore" to tell you of the events that created the place and the people he describes. That is what is done in Mrs. Ravenel's Charleston

Cloth, illustrated, $2.50 net (postage 17c.).

Mr. Lucas' A Wanderer in London

SUPPOSE that you could take long rambles about London with one of the most charming talkers you know, to tell you what to see and the history of it with such fine discrimination as Mr. Lucas shows in A Wanderer in London

Cloth, illustrated, $1.75 net (postage 13c.).

Clifton Johnson's Mississippi Valley

SUPPOSE you could wander down the Mississippi, drifting on a lumber raft, poling a "shanty boat," walking on the levee, paddling a dugout on the bayou or a bateau on the headwaters with the author of

Highways and Byways of the Mississippi Valley

Cloth, illustrated, $2.00 net (postage 20c.).

Prof. Tucker's Ancient Athens

SUPPOSE that from day to day you could go about Ancient Athens with one of its citizens in all the social and public life of the period when its literature was greatest and most free, its thinking most original, and its eloquence most influential! Professor T. G. Tucker, of the University of Melbourne, enables one to come as near to this as any one may. Life in Ancient Athens

Published Jan. 9. Cloth, 12mo, illustrated, $1.25 net (postage 16c.).

A Story to Make You Sit Up.

"The Mystery," by Stewart Edward White and Samuel Hopkins Adams (McClure, Phillips & Co.), comes like a bracing breeze over the desert sands of prisonerofzenda romances. It is a wind off the ocean, singing of the open spaces and the world where elemental forces and passions clash and grind against the hopes and aspirations and the tamed powers of civilization. That the story inevitably invites comparison with "Treasure Island" is not at all to its discredit and not so very much to its disadvantage. Stevenson was the pioneer in a fiction that all too few have followed, and the success which "The Mystery" achieves is not only deserved, but is all the more remarkable because it is a success of collaboration. It may hold its head up in the good company of Joseph Conrad's "Youth" and "Lord Jim" and not be too much ashamed.

There is no love interest in "Mystery." That is straight and unadulterated Stevenson, of course, and it may be that in striving to avoid absolutely all sentimental effects the authors have a bit overdone the raw-head-and-bloody-bonesness of it, but there will be many who will welcome the sheer unrelieved nakedness of this tragedy of scientific endeavor on a globe still infested by human brutes. The humorous aspects of Dr. Karl Augustus Schermerhorn's indefatigable pursuit of the chemical and physical sources of power in an environment composed of such as Ezra Selover, the repulsive skipper with a mania for a clean ship; "Handy Solomon," of the steel hook substitute for a hand, perpetually trolling out piratical "Barbaree" staves; Nigger Robinson, Pulz and Perdosa, will, perhaps, be missed by some and more will fail to appreciate the grimness of the humor, but this romance of benevolent intelligence racing against the blind, uncomprehending forces of volcanic nature while struggling at the same time to cope with unintelligent greed is emphatically calculated to make a jaded novel-reading public sit up, and in more senses than one.

NOTES IN SEASON.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY have in preparation a new volume in their True Biographies series on the great Virginian, Patrick Henry, by George Morgan, author of "The Issue," and other historical novels. The book, which will be ready in the spring, has a timely interest in view of the forthcoming Jamestown centennial celebration.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS will publish in February Edith Wharton's "Madame de Treymes," a brilliant story of a young American who marries into a French family of high position, in which Mrs. Wharton is said to show in the most subtle, discerning and striking way the contrast between the French and American views of family relations and the consequences. The volume will have illustrations in color by Alonzo Kimball.

DUFFIELD & CO. will publish in February a new novel by Charles Egbert Craddock, entitled "The Windfall"; also, "The Spirit of Labor," the biography of a Chicago workingman and trades-unionist, by Hutchins Hapgood, author of "The Autobiography of a Thief." In his new book much curious information, given from the inside, has been gathered by Mr. Hapgood on the subject of labor unions and the laboring point-of-view generally. They also announce for the spring: "The Dower Woods," by Emma Brooke, author of "The Engrafted Rose," and "A Winged Victory," by Professor Robert Morse Lovett, of the University of Chicago, author of "Richard Gresham."

E. P. DUTTON & CO. will publish on the 29th inst., "The Lonely Lady of Grosvenor Square," a delightful new story by Mrs. Henry de la Pasture, author of "Peter's Mother," which received a very cordial reception in England and in this country. They have just ready a work on the "Recent Progress in the Study of Variation, Heredity and Evolution," by Robert Heath Lock, Fellow of Gonville and Cains College, Cambridge; "Queen and Cardinal," a memoir of Anne of Austria and of her relation with Cardinal Mazarin, by Mrs. Colquhon Grant; "Studies in Biography," by Sir Spencer Walpole, including sketches of Peel, Cobden, Disraeli, Bismarck, Napoleon III., and others; "The Children of the Nation: How their Health and Vigor Should be Promoted by the State," by the Right Hon. Sir John E. Gorst; also, "Infant Mortality, a Social Problem," by George Newman, Lecturer on Public Health at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY expect to publish at an early date, two books of special interest in view of the approaching tri-centennial of Jamestown, Va. One is the "Travels" of the famous Captain John Smith, or, to give the formidable title in full: "The Generall Historie of Virginia, New England, and the Summer Isles, with the Proceedings of those Severall Colonies and the Accidents that Befel them in all their Journyes and Discoveries. By Captaine John Smith, Sometymes Governour in those Countryes, and Admirall of New England." The rare works that make up this volume are here assembled in convenient form for the first time since their original publication in 1624-30. The edition will contain facsimile reproductions of all the maps and illustrations in the originals, including the rare portraits of the Duchess of Richmond and Pocahontas. The other book is "The Birth of the Nation: Jamestown, 1607," by Mrs. Roger A. Pryor, author of "The Mother of Washington and Her Times," etc. Mrs. Pryor's admirable style and unflagging enthusiasm for Colonial history should find fitting employment in this story of the first Virginia Colony.

panto, Philippine Islands, 1905. Manila, P. I., Bureau of Public Printing, 1906, [1907.] 58 p. il. pl. maps, 8°, (Dept. of the Interior, Mining Bureau bulletin.) pap., gratis.

A considerable deposit of copper exists in the Mancayan-Suyoc region, Lepanto Province, Island of Luzon. Mr. Eveland, who is a geologist of the Mining Bureau, has devoted a large part of his paper to native customs in the mining of copper, illustrating with photographs. His conclusion is that the region is at least worth more at the hands of the government than a preliminary survey.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

JANUARY 19, 1907.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter for advertising pages should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers and librarians depend on the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalog," and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

COPYRIGHT CONTRACT AND CONSPIRACY.

COPYRIGHT protection, as set forth in last week's editorial discussion, secures to the copyright proprietor, whether the original author or the publisher as his assigns, the exclusive right to "vend" his copyrighted book—a comprehensive term of which any proposed change in the pending copyright measure would be merely declaratory. How that right shall be protected and enforced is, as we have indicated, a question of the law of contract. If a purchaser buys a piece of land, or a patented article, or a book, without due legal notice of restriction of sale he is entitled to the full and unrestricted use of his purchase—except, of course, that he may not copy or reproduce the patented article or the book. In the case of land the restriction can be enforced and perpetuated without difficulty because the title passes through a deed, which is a matter of public record and in which both private and public notice of the restriction may be given. In the case of a patented article or a book, while the patent or copyright notice is measurably a warning that restrictions are possible, to an extent not practicable in the case of other and ordinary chattels, it is not legally quite clear or practically quite easy to give proper notice to successive buyers of any restriction which it is desired to enforce and perpetuate.

In the endeavor to protect the retail prices of books, three methods have been recently employed. The first was that utilized by the Bobbs-Merrill Company in the case, for example, of "The Castaway," where a notice was printed on the book, based on the copyright, setting forth the restrictions of sale. The second was that adopted by the Scribners in giving general notice of restriction on their catalogues and bill heads rather than on copies of the book. The third was the agency system used by the "Authors and Newspapers Association," in whose series of 50-cent fiction John Wanamaker, for example, was made sole selling-agent in New York and Philadelphia, with a provision in the agency contract that the 50-cent retail price should be maintained for one year, notice of which was printed in each book.

Each of these methods has been passed upon by the courts, though not yet finally settled by the ultimate authority. In the first case, the Circuit Court of Appeals in New York pointed out specifically that any such restriction must be based on contractual rather than copyright law. In the second case, the same court held that the notice of restriction was not sufficient to bind successive purchasers under the law of contract, and expressed doubt whether the principles upheld by the courts in respect to patented and proprietary articles would apply to copyright articles—a doubt which we are disposed to think is likely to be resolved by the final tribunal, in accordance with decisions in other countries, that the same principles apply to all. In the third case, the Providence decision held that an underseller who had obtained copies of the book for the purpose of cutting prices had sufficient notice of the restriction to be held responsible, and an injunction was granted, though the court expressed doubt as to how far further purchasers could be held to knowledge of the restriction. It is evident, from these cases, that the courts are more or less disposed to uphold a restricted sale, not as a question of copyright, but under contractual relations, provided sufficient notice is given; but just what constitutes the right kind of notice and how far this notice can be carried to successive purchasers, is by no means settled.

The right of each publisher or dealer to control the sale of his own books, to the full extent permitted under the law of contracts, has not been challenged by the courts; but we come now to a third question, i.e., at what point this restriction becomes a conspiracy or a restraint on trade, bringing it under the ban either of the common law or of the anti-trust legislation. The Philadelphia decision in the druggist cases may not be finally upheld and may not be adjudged applicable to the conditions of the booktrade. The decision is to the effect that what may be lawful for an individual proprietor is not lawful when one proprietor endeavors, under mutual agreement, to protect the interest of another proprietor; this is likely to constitute conspiracy under the common law or be a restraint of trade, under ban of the anti-trust law.

It is because of the doubts aroused by this decision that the American Publishers' Association at its annual meeting last week decided to rescind its previous action and place the plan of reform in the shape of recommendation, leaving its execution to the honor and fairness of each member. Thus the danger is obviated of arraignment as a conspiracy or as a combination in restraint of trade.

These recommendations have the individual support of the foremost houses of the trade, each for itself; and the result will be simply that if any dealer undersells he is likely to be cut off from trade discounts by the house on whose publications he cuts prices. The Macy house, for instance, would be able to obtain books, but only at retail prices—so that it would have little fighting ground and would simply have to face the loss on selling at cut prices books for which it must pay full rates. The American Publishers' Association has practically adopted closely the scheme of the English Association, which has worked, on the whole, effectively and with less friction than the American plan. The prosperity of the past year has been dependent in no small measure on the practical application of reform principles, and we believe that there is no practical danger that the reform will not continue under the new method. Every fair-minded bookseller who appreciates fair dealing and has a backbone of his own should continue to uphold the net price system.

The opinion of Judge Colt, of Boston, on the use of the word Webster, of which the text is given in full elsewhere, is a clear presentation of the facts and a lucid statement of the law, which, we believe, is likely to be upheld by the Circuit Court of Appeals and by the U. S. Supreme Court, to which, we understand, it is the intention of the Merriam Company to appeal the case. Judge Colt reverts to the original decision in the Merriam cases of 1890-92, as cited with approval by the U. S. Supreme Court in the Singer patent case, all of which denied the right of a proprietor of a copyrighted or patented article to hold a monopoly in a name as a trade mark after the copyright or patent on the article had expired. The question was again brought into court because Mr. Ogilvie sued to restrain the Merriam Company from sending letters to retailers, impeaching his use of the word Webster, and because the Merriam Company, in a cross-bill, set up the claim that the word Webster was now associated with their Webster's International Dictionary, rather than with the old Webster's Unabridged Dictionary which went out of copyright in 1889. The pith of the decision is that the word Webster may be used on dictionaries by others than the original copyright proprietors and cannot be protected as a trade-mark, but that the publishers of rival Websters must make clear that the Webster Dictionary is their publication, and not that of the original copyright proprietor. Mr. Ogilvie, the judge holds, has done that on his Webster's Imperial Dictionary, but not in certain of his circulars and advertisements. Wherefore the court enjoins the Merriam Company from interfering with the Ogilvie customers and enjoins Ogilvie from sending out circulars and advertisements which may mislead the public into confusing his Webster's Dictionaries with the Merriam Webster's dictionaries. Under Judge Colt's decision, at least until it is definitely reversed by a higher court, the retail trade will be fully justified in handling either or both lines of Webster dictionaries.

DECISION AS TO THE RIGHT TO USE THE NAME OF WEBSTER.

We give below the opinion of Judge Colt, of the Circuit Court of the United States, District of Massachusetts, rendered on January 9, 1907, in the suits brought by George W. Ogilvie against G. & C. Merriam Company, and by the G. & C. Merriam Company against George W. Ogilvie, as to the right to use the name of Webster in the title of dictionaries of the English language:

This bill and cross-bill present two general questions: Has the defendant, the G. & C. Merriam Company, the exclusive right to the use of the name Webster in the title of dictionaries of the English language? And, second, has the complainant, George W. Ogilvie, unmistakably informed the public that his dictionary is a Webster's dictionary published by George W. Ogilvie, and not a Webster's dictionary published by G. & C. Merriam Company?

The dictionary published by Ogilvie is entitled Webster's Imperial Dictionary, and he seeks by his bill to enjoin the Merriam Company from sending out threatening letters and circulars to the trade to the effect that the Merriam Company has the exclusive right to the use of the name Webster upon dictionaries. On the other hand, the Merriam Company, by its cross-bill, seeks to enjoin Ogilvie from the use of the name Webster upon his dictionary, and from sending out misleading circulars and advertisements respecting his dictionary. It is claimed by the Merriam Company that this use of the name Webster and these circulars and advertisements are an infringement of Webster's International Dictionary, which is the latest edition of Webster's dictionary published by the Merriam Company.

The evidence shows that the Ogilvie dictionary is an enlarged and revised edition of Webster's dictionary, based upon Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, which was published and copyrighted by G. & C. Merriam in 1847, and upon which the copyright expired in 1889. The evidence also shows that the Merriam Company, and its predecessors in title, G. & C. Merriam & Company and G. & C. Merriam, have been the publishers of Webster's dictionaries for more than fifty years, having acquired all the rights in Webster's dictionary from the heirs of Noah Webster previous to 1847, and that since that time they have published numerous editions of this work.

It further appears from the evidence that on the back or cover of every copy of each edition of this book published by Noah Webster and by the Merriams, beginning with the year 1806, have appeared the words "Webster's Dictionary," and that this is the generic name by which this book has always been known and described.

It further appears from the evidence that from 1847 to 1889 the Merriams were the sole publishers of Webster's dictionaries, and that in 1889 the name Webster, as applied to dictionaries, had acquired a secondary meaning, and indicated to the public the dictionaries published and sold by the Merriam Company. It further appears that, since the expiration of the Merriam copyright in Webster's Unabridged Dictionary in 1889, various editions of Webster's dictionary have been published and sold by other publishers; but, notwithstanding this circumstance, it is shown by a preponderance of evidence that the name Webster still indicates to the public the dictionaries published and sold by the Merriam Company.

We have then to inquire what are the rights of Ogilvie with respect to the use of the name Webster upon dictionaries after the expiration of the Merriam copyright in 1889, it appearing that the name Webster has a two-fold signification, in that it is the generic name of the dictionary, and also indicates to the public the dictionaries published and sold by the Merriam Company.

A copyright, the same as a patent, is a monopoly created by statute. This monopoly is granted upon the implied condition that at the expiration of the copyright the book, and the name by which it is designated, are dedicated to the public; in other words, at the expiration of the copyright, both the book and its generic name become public property. To say that the public have the right to publish the book, and not the incidental right to use the name by which it is known, is in effect to destroy the public right, and to perpetuate the monopoly. For instance, to hold that the Merriam Company, after the expiration of its copyright in Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, still has the exclusive right to the use of the name Webster on some theory of trademark or trade-name, or unfair competition, would be to nullify the public dedication, and perpetuate the monopoly secured by the copyright. It follows, therefore, as a necessary result, that at the expiration of the copyright any person has the right to publish the copyrighted book, and to call it by its generic name.

But it may so happen, as in the case at bar, that, at the expiration of the copyright, the name by which the book is known has also acquired a secondary meaning, and has come to indicate to the public the book published and sold by the publisher who took out the copyright. In such a case, another person must so use the name as to protect individual property rights, and to prevent injury to the public. While no restrictions can be imposed upon the right to use the name, such person must, so far as is consistent with such use, protect the good-will and business of the original publisher, and guard the public against deception. The duty, therefore, is imposed upon such person of accompanying his publication with such indications as to the source of publication as will unmistakably inform the public that the book is published by himself, and not by the original publisher. After having taken these precautions, if any injury results to the business of the original publisher, it is damnum absque injuria. Such injury is analogous to the incidental injury to the business of another which may result from the absolute right of everyone to use his own name in his own business.

It follows, in the case at bar, that Ogilvie, upon the expiration of the Merriam copyright, has the right to publish the copyrighted book, or a revised edition thereof, and to call it Webster's Dictionary, or Webster's Imperial Dictionary, provided that he clearly indicates to the public that it is a Webster's Dictionary published by him, and not a Webster's Dictionary published by the Merriam Company.

In 1890, or soon after the expiration of the copyright in Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, the Merriams brought several suits in which they set up their exclusive right to the use of the name Webster in the title of dictionaries. In these cases the decisions were adverse to the Merriam Company upon this point, the courts holding that to give the Merriam Company this exclusive right would be to perpetuate the copyright monopoly.

In Merriam v. Holloway Publishing Company, 43 Fed. Rep. 450, decided September 26, 1890, Mr. Justice Miller said:

"I want to say, however, with reference to the main issue in the case, that it occurs to me that this proceeding is an attempt to establish the doctrine that a party who has had the copyright of a book until it has expired, may continue that monopoly indefinitely, under the pretence that it is protected by a trademark, or something of that sort. I do not believe in any such doctrine, nor do my associates. When a man takes out a copyright, for any of his writings or works, he impliedly agrees that, at the expiration of that copyright, such writings or works shall go to the public and become public property. . . . The grant of a monopoly implies that, after the monopoly has expired, the public shall be entitled ever afterwards to the unrestricted use of the book. . . .

"I will say this, however, that the contention that complainants have any special property in 'Webster's Dictionary' is all nonsense, since the copyright has expired. What do they mean by the expression 'their book,' when they speak of Webster's Dictionary? It may be their book if they have bought it, as a copy of Webster's Dictionary is my book if I have bought it. But in no other sense than that last indicated can the complainants say of Webster's Dictionary that it is their book."

In Merriam v. Famous Shoe & Clothing Company, 47 Fed. Rep. 411, decided September 10, 1891, Judge Thayer said:

"I have no doubt that defendant is entitled to use the words 'Webster's Dictionary' to describe the work that it is engaged in publishing and selling. Those words were used to describe Webster's Dictionary of the edition of 1847, and, as the copyright on that edition has expired, it has now become public property. Any one may reprint that edition of the work, and entitle the reprint 'Webster's Dictionary.' The latter words, which appeared on the title-page and on the outer cover of books of the edition of 1847, have become public property, as well as other parts of the work. Defendant's right to call the 'Famous Reprint Edition' 'Webster's Dictionary' is as clear as the right of complainants to give that title to books of the edition of 1864."

In Merriam v. Texas Siftings Publishing Company, 49 Fed. Rep. 944, decided March 15, 1892, Judge Shipman said:

"The plaintiffs are not entitled to an exclusive use of the name 'Webster's Dictionary' upon copies of editions the copyrights of which have expired, for the name is not a trademark. Mere copies of the edition of 1847 and 1859 can be reproduced by a publisher, over his own name, provided he makes no misrepresentations to induce the public to believe that it is another book, the right to publish which is the exclusive property of the plaintiff."

Merriam v. Holloway Publishing Company and Merriam v. Famous Shoe & Clothing Company were cited with approval by the Supreme Court in Singer Manufacturing Company v. June Manufacturing Company, 163 U. S. 109.

Singer Manufacturing Company v. June Manufacturing Company was a patent case, and related to the exclusive right to the use of the name Singer upon sewing machines after the expiration of the patent, which was claimed on the ground that the name Singer indicated to the public the machines manufactured by the Singer Manufacturing Company. In the opinion of the Court in that case, Mr. Justice White said:

"It is self-evident that on the expiration of a patent the monopoly created by it ceases to exist, and the right to make the thing formerly covered by the patent becomes public property. It is upon this condition that the patent is granted. . . . It equally follows from the cessation of the monopoly and the falling of the patented device into the domain of things public, that along with the public ownership of the device there must also necessarily pass to the public the generic designation of the thing which has arisen during the monopoly. . . . To say otherwise would be to hold that although the public had acquired the device covered by the patent, yet the owner of the patent or the manufacturer of the patented thing had retained the designated name which was essentially necessary to vest the public with the full enjoyment of that which had become theirs by the disappearance of the monopoly. In other words, that the patentee or manufacturer could take the benefit and advantage of the patent upon the condition that at its termination the monopoly should cease, and yet when the end was reached disregard the public dictation and practically perpetuate indefinitely an exclusive right. The public having the right on the expiration of the patent to make the patented article and to use its generic name, to restrict this use, either by preventing its being placed upon the articles when manufactured, or by using it in advertisements or circulars, would be to admit the right and at the same time destroy it. It follows, then, that the right to use the name in every form passes to the public with the dedication resulting from the expiration of the patent. . . . But it does not follow, as a consequence of a dedication, that the general power, vested in the public, to make the machine and use the name imports that there is no duty imposed, on the one using it, to adopt such precautions as will protect the property of others and prevent injury to the public interest, if by doing so no substantial restriction is imposed on the right of freedom of use. . . . It is obvious that if the name dedicated to the public, either as a consequence of the monopoly or by the voluntary act of the party, has a twofold significance, one generic and the other pointing to the origin of manufacture and the name is availed of by another without clearly indicating that the machine, upon which the name is marked, is made by him, then the right to use the name because of its generic signification would imply a power to destroy any good-will which belonged to the original maker. It would import, not only this, but also the unrestricted right to deceive and defraud the public by so using the name as to delude them into believing that the machine made by one person was made by another. . . . On the other hand, to compel the one who uses the name after the expiration of the patent, to indicate that the articles are made by himself, in no way impairs the right of use, but simply regulates and prevents wrong to individuals and injury to the public. This fact is fully recognized by the well settled doctrine which holds that 'every one has the absolute right to use his own name honestly in his own business, even though he may thereby incidentally interfere with and injure the business of another having the same name. In such case the inconvenience or loss to which those having a common right are subjected is damnum absque injuria. . . .'

"The result, then, of the American, the English, and the French doctrine, universally upheld is this, that where, during the life of a monopoly created by a patent, a name, whether it be arbitrary or be that of the inventor, has become, by his consent, either express or tacit, the identifying and generic name of the thing patented, this name passes to the public with the cessation of the monopoly which the patent created. Where another avails himself of this public dedication to make the machine and use the generic designation, he can do so in all forms, with the fullest liberty, by affixing such name to the machines, by referring to it in advertisements and by other means, subject, however, to the condition that the name must be so used as not to deprive others of their rights or to deceive the public, and, therefore, that the name must be accompanied with such indications that the thing manufactured is the work of the one making it, as will unmistakably inform the public of that fact."

The Merriam Company contend that these cases are not applicable to the case at bar, because it is shown by the evidence that Webster's dictionary now indicates to the public the latest edition of this book published by that company. This position is untenable. The fundamental ground on which these decisions rest is that at the expiration of the statutory term in a copyright or a patent the thing copyrighted or patented, together with its generic name, becomes public property. It follows that, since 1889, or upon the expiration of the copyright in Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, Ogilvie had the same right as the Merriam Company to publish and sell that edition of Webster's Dictionary, or a revised and enlarged edition of that book, and to use the name Webster in the title. And this public right cannot be taken away or abridged on any theory of trademark or unfair competition such as is now advanced by the Merriam Company. This is only another way of seeking to perpetuate the monopoly secured by the copyright. When the word Webster as applied to dictionaries has once become dedicated to the public, it is not again subject to exclusive appropriation as a trademark or trade-name, nor can the public be deprived of its use on the ground of unfair competition.

It only remains to consider whether Ogilvie has clearly shown that his dictionary is published by himself and not by the Merriam Company. Upon the back or cover of the Ogilvie book is printed "George W. Ogilvie," and upon the title-page is printed "George W. Ogilvie, Publisher." The form of the book is the usual form which characterizes unabridged dictionaries. With respect to the book itself I think Ogilvie has done all which the law requires to distinguish his book from the dictionaries published by the Merriams, including Webster's International Dictionary. As was said by Judge Shipman in Merriam v. Texas Siftings Publishing Company: "The mere form or size of the volume in which Webster's Dictionary has ordinarily appeared does not in the mind of the public connect the plaintiff with the manufacture of the dictionary, and there is no characteristic of a trademark in such ordinary form or size." 49 Fed. Rep. 944.

With respect to the Ogilvie circulars and advertisements, the case is quite different. It is evident that these circulars and advertisements are misleading and deceptive. They convey the impression that the Ogilvie book is a new edition of Webster's Dictionary published by the Merriam Company, and that it is the successor of Webster's International Dictionary; and, further, Ogilvie has taken portions of the printed matter in the circulars and advertisements of the International Dictionary, and inserted them in his circulars and advertisements. All this goes to show the intention of Ogilvie to trespass upon the reputation of the Merriam Company, and to deceive purchasers into purchasing his dictionary for one of the series of Webster's dictionaries published by the Merriam Company. It is clear, therefore, that Ogilvie should be enjoined from sending out these circulars and advertisements in their present form. These circulars and advertisements should be so reformed as not in any manner to convey the impression that Ogilvie is the successor of the Merriam Company, or that his book is a new edition of any of the series of Webster's dictionaries published by the Merriam Company.

The conclusions I have reached are that the Merriam Company should be enjoined from sending out circulars to the effect that they have the exclusive right to the use of the name Webster in the title of dictionaries, and that Ogilvie should be enjoined from sending out his circulars and advertisements in their present form; and a decree may be drawn accordingly.

THE AMERICAN PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION ADOPTS A NEW PLAN.

THE annual meeting of the American Publishers' Association was held at the rooms of the Aldine Association in New York City, on January 9, (not the 10th, as inadvertently stated last week,) with President Frank H. Scott in the chair. There were present, in person or by proxy, thirty-one firms. The minutes of the annual meeting of February, 1906, were read and approved, as was also the report of the treasurer. It was reported that the membership of the Association was made up of 26 charter members, 14 associate members and 20 annual members—a total of sixty.

The president addressed the meeting, and stated that the Board of Directors had voted to recommend to the Association the passage of the following resolutions:

I. Resolved, That the Plan to correct evils connected with the cutting of prices on copyright books adopted at a meeting of the American Publishers' Association, held February 13, 1901, together with all votes and resolutions since adopted, amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, be and the same hereby are rescinded and revoked.

The president explained that the purpose of this resolution was to repeal all the existing rules and regulations of the Association having any reference to the prices of books.

II. Resolved, That the following Plan be adopted by the Association:

AMERICAN PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION PLAN.

(1) That the members of the American Publishers' Association agree that all copyrighted books first issued by them after January 1, 1907, (excepting school books, subscription books, and other books not sold through the trade, and also, if desired, new editions, works of fiction and juveniles,) shall be published at net prices; and it is recommended that the retail price of a net book, marked net, be printed on a paper wrapper covering said book. Each member is at liberty to fix such net prices on his copyrighted books as may seem to him proper. The only purpose of this agreement is that the public shall be informed of the real price of each net copyrighted book, which otherwise would be difficult.

(2) It is recommended to the different members of the Association that each member thereof shall sell his copyrighted books at wholesale only to book dealers and others who will maintain for one year after publication the retail price of his net copyrighted books, and who sell his net copyrighted books, (except at retail) to no one who cuts his net prices.

A dealer or bookseller may be defined as one who makes it a regular part of his business to sell books and carry stock of them for public sale.

(3) Believing that the interests of each individual member of the Association will be furthered by selling his copyrighted books only to booksellers who will allow no greater discount on copyrighted works of fiction (not net) and on copyrighted juvenile books (not net) than 28 per cent. during one year after publication, it is recommended to each member of the Association that he shall act upon this suggestion and that he carry out the same in the manner above suggested in the case of copyrighted net books. The conditions governing the sale of fiction are such that the Association only suggests a maximum discount on retail sales which, however, it is hoped may rarely be given.

The purpose of the Association, so far as it can accomplish such purpose by recommendation, is to secure plainly stated prices of net copyrighted books, and to bring the actual selling price of copyrighted books nearer the stated price as far as reasonably and fairly possible; and to avoid special rebates and discounts and to provide for equality in the treatment of retail purchasers.

(4) Nothing contained in the foregoing recommendations shall be considered as applicable to sales made to libraries, although it is recommended that Libraries be allowed a discount of not more than 10 per cent. on net books or 33 1-3 per cent. on copyrighted fiction and juveniles (not net). By libraries is meant libraries to which access is either free or by annual subscription. Book Clubs are not meant to be included in this description.

(5) It is suggested that a publisher of net copyrighted books selling the same at retail should add to his retail price the cost of postage or expressage when books are sent out of the city where he does business.

(6) It is recommended to each member of the Association that he shall not offer nor sell his copyrighted books to any one who offers such copyrighted books in combination with periodicals at less than the trade subscription price of such periodicals, plus the net or minimum retail price of such copyrighted books.

(7) Nothing contained herein shall be taken as applicable to any book after the expiration of a year from its publication.

(8) Nothing in the above recommendations shall be considered in the nature of an agreement, and no penalty shall attach to a disregard of any of them.

(9) The directors of the Association are authorized to establish and maintain an office and engage a suitable person as manager who shall act as an assistant to the secretary and perform such duties as shall be assigned to him by the directors.

The president called attention to the fact that under this resolution and plan there is no agreement except as to calling books of a certain class "net books" and designating their prices as "net prices," the rest being solely in the nature of recommendations which the members are wholly free to disregard if they choose. These resolutions and the plan were favorably voted upon.

A third resolution to amend the by-laws by striking out Article VII., looking to the removal from the by-laws of all provision for penalties excepting only those for non-payment of dues was deferred for action to a special meeting of the Association to be held within a month from the date of the annual meeting.

The election of directors resulted in the reelection of G. B. M. Harvey, of Harper & Brothers; Albert F. Houghton, of Houghton, Mifflin & Co.; Frank N. Doubleday, of Doubleday, Page & Co., and Craige Lippincott, of J. B. Lippincott Company.

Before adjourning, the secretary read a communication from the American Booksellers' Association, consisting of resolutions passed at the annual convention of that Association held in 1906, requesting the American Publishers' Association to issue in the future all works of fiction on the net price plan, suggesting that $1.20 net be such net price on books that would otherwise ordinarily be issued at $1.50 list, and suggesting a similar proportionate net price on such other works of fiction as would ordinarily be listed at $1 or $1.25. The resolutions also requested the American Publishers' Association to grant to retail dealers a discount of at least 30 per cent. on net books of all sorts and to discontinue cataloguing on the net price basis all non-copyright imported books.

It was voted to instruct the secretary to write to the American Booksellers' Association stating that the American Publishers' Association regrets that it finds it inadvisable to act at this time as recommended in the resolution.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors held on the 17th inst., Frank H. Dodd, of Dodd, Mead & Co., was elected president; Charles Scribner, first vice-president; Frank H. Scott, of the Century Company, second vice-president; and Albert F. Houghton, of Houghton, Mifflin & Co., treasurer. The election of secretary was deferred to another meeting of the Board of Directors.

Resolutions were passed complimenting the retiring president, Frank H. Scott, for his efficient services in a most trying period of the Association's existence.

THE UNIVERSITY PUBLISHING CO. CONTINUES IN BUSINESS.

We regret that through a misunderstanding of a report concerning a certain transaction between the University Publishing Co. and the American Book Company we should have been led to think that the University Publishing Co. had sold its entire plant instead of only a certain part of it.. The facts are that the University Publishing Co., by a vote of its stockholders, decided to sell to the American Book Company the plates and publishing rights of its readers, spellers, arithmetics, geographies and similar grammar school textbooks. They still have, however, a considerable list left, which they will continue to publish under their old firm name at its present quarters, 27 West Twenty-third Street, New York City.

FAREWELL DINNER TO HENRY B. BURROWS.

A farewell dinner was given to Henry B. Burrows, retiring vice-president of the Burrows Brothers Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, at the Hollenden, in that city, on the evening of January 3. Three hundred employees of the concern were present. A solid silver loving cup and a silver coffee set were presented to Mr. Burrows by his former associates. President C. W. Burrows addressed his employees, and other talks were given by officers of the firm.

Henry B. Burrows has been for thirty-five years a member of the firm with his brother, C. W. Burrows, and aided largely in the expansion of its business, which reaches across the sea. He will in future make his home in New York, where he will have charge of the American agency of Hooper & Jackson, Ltd.

C. W. Cathcart will become manager of the firm to succeed Mr. Burrows.

GEORGE V. L. MEYER APPOINTED POSTMASTER-GENERAL.

George V. L. Meyer, of Massachusetts, now Ambassador to Russia, has been appointed Postmaster-General to succeed George B. Cortelyou, whose nomination as Secretary of the Treasury in place of Leslie M. Shaw was confirmed on January 15. Mr. Meyer's term of office is to begin March 4, when Mr. Cortelyou assumes his new office.

COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

AMENDMENTS AND COMMENTS ON PROPOSED COPYRIGHT BILL.

The Government Printing Office, (Library Branch,) has published for the Copyright Office, Part 2 of the "Amendments Proposed to the Copyright Bill (S. 6330, H. R. 19853,) together with other Criticisms and Suggestions received and notes to date by the Copyright office, December, 1906," (108 p. 4°;) also, Part 3, "Comment upon the Bill and upon Certain Criticisms thereof by the Copyright Committees of the American Bar Association (First Committee,) and the Association of the Bar of the City of New York,"

INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT IN RUSSIA.

A SPECIAL cable despatch from St. Petersburg to the New York Sun announces that the Minister of Justice has prepared a scheme for Russia's adoption of the international literary and musical copyright, which hitherto has been non-existent here. It will be laid before the Council of Ministers.

BOOKTRADE ASSOCIATIONS.

LADIES' NIGHT AT THE BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE.

THE annual dinner and Ladies' Night of the Booksellers' League was given at the Aldine Association on the evening of January 16. There were present 150 persons, the members of the League and their ladies having almost equal representation. On entering the banquet room a few minutes before eight o'clock each lady received a bunch of violets and each man a white carnation. At each plate was a menu printed on a handsomely decorated folder, with a recipe for a "New Year's Brew," by R. B. Howell, with design in gold and colors by Spencer Wright, presented to the League with the compliments of Paul Elder & Co.; a copy of "The Cheerful Year Book," presented by Henry Holt & Co., and a copy of "Pigs is Pigs," presented by McClure, Phillips & Co. After the excellent dinner of nine courses had been served, the chairman, Edward G. Lawrance, announced that W. G. Preston, the president of the League, who had been seriously ill, had quite recovered, and was expected back from Atlantic City in a week or two. Mr. Lawrance, in a few well-chosen words, then introduced Robert A. Watchorn, Commissioner of Emigration at Ellis Island, who spoke eloquently and optimistically of the men and women who in increasing numbers are yearly entering our ports. Mr. Watchorn dwelt on three points concerning which he claimed much misinformation had been circulated, namely, (1) immigrants do not come to this country at the rate of 1,000,000 a year, but at the rate of about half that number, as many also leave America to return to their homes in very large numbers; (2) the immigrant does not lower the standard of living, to prove which the speaker gave a number of illustrations showing that the laborer who was content in his foreign home to plod along, year after year, for a mere pittance, after he had become acclimatized in this country, and often much earlier, ranked himself with the American so far as the rate of wages demanded was concerned; and (3) the immigrants who are able to pass the standard demanded by the immigration laws are bound in time to become the main workers of this nation, which Mr. Watchorn foresees will become the nation of all nations. Mr. Watchorn's talk was applauded again and again.

Dr. Wilfred Grenfell, the next speaker, spoke nearly two hours in a most interesting manner about his work and experiences among the Labrador fishing folk. Most of the talk was illustrated with stereopticon views of life in the snow country and with moving pictures of fishing in the deep. Dr. Grenfell's work is described in a neat pamphlet issued by the Grenfell Association, a copy of which will be sent on application to the secretary, Ernest Hamlin Abbott, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City. It has been proposed by several members of the publishing trade to assist Dr. Grenfell in his efforts to establish libraries in his hospitals and homes of refuge, by donating lots of their "hurt" books and travellers' samples. Inasmuch as Dr. Grenfell's work is largely on behalf of hurt people, he himself suggested that the books need not be whole, but that "hurt" ones will do just as well. Those publishing houses who may feel disposed to contribute such reading matter, for children as well as for grown people, may send them in care of the office of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY.

There were two other speakers on the program, but one of them was unable to be present, and the other suggested that, inasmuch as the hands of the clock pointed towards midnight, his "talk" might be left over for another occasion.

PASSAIC COUNTY (N. J.) NEWSDEALERS' ASSOCIATION.

AT its regular monthly meeting the Passaic County (N. J.) Newsdealers' Association elected the following officers for the year: William T. Suttle, Jr., president; George Voorhis, vice-president; George Robinson, secretary; Andrew Brennan, treasurer; Richard Noblett, sergeant-at-arms, and John J. Rumler, John H. O'Conner and Philip Nauman, trustees.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

THE late Hamilton Aidé was a curiously versatile man. He was the author of many novels, verses and essays; he was a more or less popular composer; he turned out divers successful dramatic pieces, and he painted landscapes described as pleasing. The blood of antipathetic races was in his veins. He was the son of an English mother and an Armenian-Greek father.

H. B. MARRIOTT WATSON, whose new romance, "The Privateers," has just been brought out in this country, was born in Melbourne, Australia, where his father was a minister. At the age of nine he was taken to New Zealand, where he grew up. He was educated in England, where he took up journalism in 1887. He has served as assistant editor of Black and White and of the Pall Mall Gazette. His wife, by the way, is Rosamund Marriott Watson, who has written several volumes of very excellent verse.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

Temple Bar, after an existence of nearly half a century, has suspended publication. It was started in 1860, and Thackeray and Miss Braddon were among its earliest contributors.

WILLIAM C. REICK, who has been president of the New York Herald Company for some years, withdrew from the Herald on January 12 and has acquired an interest in the New York Times Company.

JOHN LANE, beginning with the January number, will publish The Independent Review, formerly published by Fisher Unwin. An attractive list of articles and reviews has been prepared, including papers by the Abbé Dimnet on "The Crisis in France," J. A. Hobson on "The Lords of the People," C. F. G. Masterman on "Twelve Months of Parliament," Herbert Paul on "The Victorian Drawing-Room—Lady Dorothy Nevill's Memoirs," Keir Hardie on "The Moral of Huddersfield," while Earl Russell writes a reply to "The Motor Tyranny." The ideals of cultured Liberalism which have distinguished the Review will be maintained, but, as hitherto, articles of general appeal will be included, irrespective of political interest.

BUSINESS NOTES.

ATLANTA, GA.—The Georgia News Company has been opened here to do a general book, news and stationery business.

NEW YORK CITY.—After February 1, the sales office of the A. Wessels Company will be at 156 Fifth Avenue. The address of their general office and shipping department remains as heretofore at 203 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., where all communications should be addressed.

PLATTSMOUTH, NEB.—Robert L. Mausey has sold his book business to L. J. Patterson.

PORTLAND, ME.—Samuel H. Colesworthy, Jr., bookseller, has retired from business.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—Blake & Graber, booksellers, have sold out to James D. Blake.

STUTTGART, ARK.—Gregg Mercantile Co., booksellers, have sold out.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—E. G. Wyckoff Co., booksellers, have changed the name of their firm to the Wyckoff Co.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY will bring out in February in their French Men of Letters series a volume on François Rabelais, by Arthur Tilley, Fellow and Lecturer of King's College, Cambridge, Eng.

THE sale of Henry Austin Adams's book, "The Terrible Truth About Marriage," has been stopped by the Chief of Police of Seattle, Wash., who declares he will arrest Adams for circulating indecent literature.

LUTHER BURBANK, the famous horticulturist of Santa Rosa, Cal., will stand sponsor for a work in ten volumes describing minutely, and defining from scientific standpoint, his labors in the creation of new fruits, flowers, etc.

THOMAS WHITTAKER has just published a new volume of sermons by the Rev. George Hodges, D.D., Dean of Cambridge, entitled "A Year of Grace," also a book entitled "Churchmanship and Labor," by Canon Scott Holland, Percy Dearmer, G. W. E. Russell, and others.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO. report the printing of a sixth impression of Miss Alice Brown's latest book, "The County Road," a new edition of John Esten Cook's "My Lady Pokahontas," issued specially for the 300th anniversary to be celebrated at the Jamestown Exposition.

THE ANTHEM PUBLISHERS, Mobile, Ala., have published the words and music of "Immortals," an anthem written by T. C. De Leon and set to music by F. A. Dunster, sung at the opening of the New Orleans Reunion, U. C. V., in April, 1906. The retail price of the piece is forty cents.

ACCORDING to one of the English booksellers, the greatest success of the season has been Barrie's "Peter Pan," with Arthur Rackham's illustrations. "Peter Pan" has sold out as a two guinea book, and some of the five hundred copies are selling as high as eight guineas. The cheaper edition is being reprinted and it is also being prepared in translation for circulation in France.

THE CENTURY COMPANY will publish shortly a volume on "The Dangers of Municipal Ownership," by Robert P. Porter, who has condensed the latest facts and figures showing the results of the workings of Municipal Ownership, or Municipal Trading, abroad, more especially in Great Britain. His deductions are that Municipal Ownership is always a mistake and a burden; and he bases his conclusions upon long study and wide observation of actual conditions.

THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS announces "The Principles of German Civil Law," by Dr. Ernest J. Schuster. This work is intended to assist the study of English law from a comparative point of view; to give an insight into the latest and most perfect attempt to systematize the whole of the private laws of a country, and to give some practical help to the increasing number of practitioners who in the course of their daily work have to deal with questions of foreign and private international law.

LITTLE, BROWN & CO. announce for early publication an "Index-Digest of the Interstate Commerce Acts," by the Hon. Charles S. Hamlin, a prominent member of the Boston Bar, formerly assistant secretary of the U. S. Treasury. It contains a comprehensive index of the leading words and phrases used in the Acts to regulate commerce and a comparison of other uses of the same words and phrases found in other parts of the Commerce Act and in other Acts. Each citation is accompanied with a brief digest of that part of the law in which the word or phrase is used. All the Acts digested here have been reprinted in full. The book will be found extremely useful to all who have to do with Interstate traffic.

A. S. BARNES & CO. will publish next month in their New Knowledge Series, a volume on "The Nature and Origin of Life," by Professor Felix le Dantec, member of the Faculty of the Sciences at the Sorbonne, Paris, who treats of the principles of the continuity in living and dead matter, the dangers of too hasty analysis, artificial analysis, the various conditions in which a living body may exist from a chemical point of view, artificial and real functions defined in life, natural selection, equilibrium and order, the phenomena of life compared with the phenomena of non-living matter, the cell in its movements, heredity, appearance of life, etc. A preface is being provided for this book by Professor R. K. Duncan, the editor of the series.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & COMPANY are just putting to press the 15th edition of "Bob, Son of Battle," which serves to emphasize again the somewhat remarkable career of the book. Although published nearly ten years ago, it has enjoyed a steady sale. Yet, when it first appeared it was almost regarded as a failure. It took nearly a year for American readers to discover the real quality of the book. A somewhat unusual incident attended the taking of the photographs for the illustrated edition. The publishers sent A. Radclyffe Dugmore to England to get the photographs in the sheep country, but it was so foggy that he was forced to return to the United States without them. Undaunted, he returned next year with better results, and was able to find the collie whom Alfred Ollivant used for his now famous dog hero.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO. will publish shortly an educational work of considerable interest in "Sixty-five Years in the Life of a Teacher," by the president of Swarthmore College, Dr. Edward Hicks Magill, first Principal of its preparatory department, and ever since connected with it in some capacity. His was the boyhood of struggle so familiar in the biographies of men born in the former half of the nineteenth century—he knew Williston Seminary, Yale, and Brown University as a student, and the Boston Latin School and the Providence High School as a teacher, and he abounds in anecdotes of all of them. As one of the pioneers in new methods of education he has much to tell of the origin of movements of which teachers must understand the origin if they would know their value and probable scope. Portraits of the author and views of the various institutions with which he has been connected illustrate the book.

WILLIAM J. BURKHARDT, 206 Ocean Avenue, Jersey City, N. J., as already noted, has prepared for the Valentine season a number of attractive post-cards. One of these is on manila card stock, the color of a telegram, printed in red and black, with a message from The Matrimonial Telegraph Co. Besides these Valentine Post Cards, which comprise some forty or fifty designs, at $1 the hundred, or $7.50 the thousand, Mr. Burkhardt has prepared a Valentine Promissory Note, put up ten notes in a clip; a humorous Valentine Letter, printed in facsimile of handwriting; a Valentine Prescription, a facsimile of a regular prescription blank made by Dr. Cupid; a Valentine Invoice, an original idea in imitation of a druggist's bill from a box of chocolates February 14 last year to court plaster and arnica next year; a large red heart, with a miniature broom, the handle of which is a pencil fastened thereon, with the mottos, "In time of peace prepare for war," and "You have made a clean sweep of my heart;"; a large Yale key card, with a heart-shaped key ring attached, lettered, "This emblem, dear, is sent to thee, that to my heart you hold the key;" "Valentine Pen Wipers," in five designs, also, several other unique novelties, samples of which will be sent on application.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY expect to bring out in March, in two volumes, "The Life and Letters of Edwin Lawrence Godkin," editor of The Nation and of the New York Evening Post for nineteen years, edited by Rollo Ogden, the present editor of The Evening Post. An important contribution to the study of psychology, shortly to be published, is Professor W. Mitchell's "Structure and Growth of the Mind." Professor Mitchell, who holds the Chair of Philosophy in the University of Adelaide, has written what might be called a universal introduction to psychology. It is not an introduction in the usual sense of an elementary survey, but rather an original investigation of the problems preceding the study of psychology proper. By a striking coincidence a book on "Jamaica" was announced by the Macmillan Company on the day when the news was received of the earthquake at Kingston. The book belongs to the same series, illustrated in color, as Snell's "North Devon," which was published a few months ago. It contains an admirable account by A. S. Forrest of the history and the chief features of interest of Jamaica, and is illustrated with twenty-four paintings by John Henderson, reproduced in color. The book is dedicated to Sir Alfred Jones, who is mentioned in the dispatches from Kingston as active in the work of rescue and reorganization.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS will publish this month the concluding volumes—four to eight—of the Knutsford edition of Mrs. Gaskell's works, which will contain stories never before published. They will bring out in February William Henry Hoyt's "The Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence: a Study of Evidence Showing that the Alleged Early Declaration of Independence by Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, on the 20th of May, 1775, is Spurious." If Mr. Hoyt's contention is recognized, North Carolina must change a holiday, the State seal and flag, and the inscription on the monument to the "signers" of the Mecklenburg Declaration. In March they will publish "The Epic of Paradise Lost, Twelve Essays," by Marianna Woodhull, that treat Milton's masterpiece largely from the technical standpoint. It was the author's intention to prove that the epic form alone was suitable to the subject, and in support of this Milton's attempts to embody the theme in tragedy form are examined. The concluding essay finds in Milton's love of Nature the secret both of his lyrical force and his epical attitude. Owing to the illness of T. C. Brogan, who is translating George Le Quin's "Memoirs of Comte de Rambuteau," Messrs. Putnam will probably not publish this book until late in the spring or early in the summer. The volume, which is to be a fully illustrated octavo, will present the experiences of the chamberlain of Napoleon I., and is said to be a vivid picture of the character of the emperor and of the French society of his reign.

E. P. Dutton & Co., as usual, have prepared an extensive line of cards and novelties for the Valentine season. Among their line this year is a pond lily on a pad, which when spread out shows a flower in full bloom on the leaves of which are printed cupids with appropriate sentiments. Among their comics is a shaped card showing a cat and a rabbit, with perforated eyes, behind which pupils on a movable card, swinging backward and forward, give a surprising effect to the motto, "I think, my dear, your beauty lies in just those lovely moving eyes." They have a number of attractive folders addressed, "To My Valentine," with attractive pictures and suitable sentiments or verses; shaped cards in all styles with decorations of flowers; large and small heart-shaped novelties; Cupid's Cablegrams, Cupid's Railway Guides; Addresses to My True Love, handsomely illuminated, besides attractive cards of all shapes and post-cards illuminated and with surprises in the way of folders. In their publishing department they announce "The Historical Study of the Mother Tongue, an Introduction to Philological Methods," by Henry Cecil Wyld, Baines Professor of the English Language and Philology in the University of Liverpool; "Six Lectures on Painting Delivered to the Students of the Royal Academy of Arts in London," by George Clausen, Professor of Painting in the Royal Academy; "Aims and Ideals in Art," eight lectures delivered to students of the Royal Academy by George Clausen; "The Roman Capitol in Ancient and Modern Times," a description of the citadel, the temples, the senatorial palace, the Palace of the Conservators and the Museum, by E. Rodocanachi, translated from the French by Frederick Lawton; also, a new edition of "The Thread of Gold," with a new introduction by the author, Arthur C. Benson.

A. C. McClurg have about completed their plans for the spring campaign and their preliminary announcements are about as important as they are numerous. In March they will have ready a story of the Central Pacific Railroad, by Sara Pratt Carr (illustrated by John W. Norton), in which those gigantic promoters, Leland Stanford, Collis P. Huntington, Mark Hopkins and Charles Crocker, play a part, the plot being full of the lively action characteristic of California, in her early days; "Indian Love Letters," by Marah Ellis Ryan, author of "For the Soul of Rafael," etc. (illustrated by Ralph Fletcher Seymour,) a series of letters written by a Hopi Indian lad who was educated at an Eastern college, which give a new and more personal meaning to the red man's spiritual preferences; "Mission of California and the Old Southwest," by Jesse S. Hildrup, a souvenir for the visitor with full page illustrations of the missions from photographs; "The Story of Bawn," a characteristic Irish story by Katherine Tynan; "Hawaiian Folk Tales," by Thomas G. Thrum, whose acquaintance with the history and folk-lore of the Sandwich Islands is very comprehensive; "Sojourning, Shopping and Studying in Paris," by Miss E. Otis Williams, a useful handbook, especially for ladies who are often without the knowedge of getting the greatest good out of a sojourn in a strange city; "Cosmos, the Soul and God," by the Rev. C. L. Arnold, a profound discussion of the relations of matter, mind and soul, interesting to investigators in the field of psychical inquiry; "Grasshopper Land," by Margaret W. Morley, a text-book on the line of the author's "Bee People," etc., with illustrations drawn by Miss Morley; "Forest Friends," by Dr. John Madden, a book of especial interest at this time when the advance of civilization is so rapidly divesting the once wild places of their animal life; also, "Fingerposts to Children's Reading," by Walter Taylor Field, suggestions as to the most profitable lines of reading for children of all ages. In April they expect to bring out "Langford of the Three Bars," by Kate and Virgil D. Boyles, a lively story of the South Dakota cattle country during the sway of the "rustler," with illustrations in color by N. C. Wyeth; "A Handbook of the Philippines," by Hamilton M. Wright, who provides comprehensive information about the islands, the customs and manners of the people, the resources, climate, productions and commercial importance of our possessions in the Orient, with maps and illustrations; "Life and Correspondence of Thomson Jay Hudson," the author of "The Law of Psychic Phenomena," etc., edited by his son, Charles B. Hudson; the second part of Molmenti's Venice, treating of "Venice in the Golden Age;" also, two new volumes in the series of Literature of Libraries, on "Justus Lipsius" and Gabriel Naude."

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," book-trade subscribers are given the privilege of a free advertisement for books out of print, of five nonpareil lines, exclusive of address, in any issue except special numbers, to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents a line, and amount should be inclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents a line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents a nonpareil line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

All other small undisplayed advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents a nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their Communications.

BOOKS WANTED.

☞ In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash.]

☞ Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly" does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties

GEO. W. OGILVIE DEFEATS THE G. & C. MERRIAM COMPANY

JUDGE COLT, of the U. S. Circuit Court, in Boston, has just decided that Webster's Imperial Dictionary is NOT an infringement, in any sense, of the "rights" (whatever they are) of G. & C. Merriam Co., and from claiming an exclusive right to the name of "Noah Webster" or "Webster" on a dictionary—in short, the court's order forbids them to claim further exclusive rights in Webster's name. In other words, we won the suit we started against them, seeking an injunction to restrain them from interfering with our business.

To those dealers who refused to be intimidated by the Merriam Co.'s threats to sue, and have continued to sell my dictionary, I tender my sincere thanks; to those others who wished to sell it, but were fearful of suits, your spirit was willing but you couldn't afford to get mixed up in my fight. But now that the ban is lifted—it's not too late—the book has seasoned in the meantime—it has gone through a severe test for quality—and WON.

GEORGE W. OGILVIE, Chicago, Ill.

Publisher of the following Genuine Websters

The whole series consists of four books: (1) Webster's Imperial Dictionary, 2175 pages, and its abridgments, which are as follows: (2) Webster's Inter-Collegiate Dictionary, 1224 pages; (3) Webster's Adequate Dictionary, 725 pages, and (4) Webster's Sterling Dictionary, 567 pages. Send for descriptive circulars and prices to the trade, or order from your jobber.

MY APPRECIATION OF THE MANNER IN WHICH THE LEGAL END OF THIS BATTLE HAS BEEN HANDLED TAKES THE FORM OF THIS PUBLIC ACKNOWLEDGEMENT: Mr. GEO. F. BEAN, 176 Federal St., Boston, Mass., my attorney, attended to it from the start, and to his devotion, perspicacity and legal ability I am largely, if not wholly, indebted for the victory; while because of his consideration and thoughtfulness throughout the trying two-and-a-half years which the case covered I was the possessor of a degree of peace of mind probably far beyond that that I could have had if represented by any other lawyer of my acquaintance. To my friends in and out of the publishing business I commend Mr. Bean.

GEO. W. OGILVIE.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO PRESS

NEW BOOKS

Railway Organization and Working Edited by ERNEST R. DEWSNUP

A score of prominent railway officials have contributed to this volume the condensed results of their experience. Eminently practical and thoroughly readable, the book will occupy a unique position as a manual of railroad business. It is equally adapted to university classes and to the needs of the professional railroader. 510 pages; small 8vo, cloth; net $2.00, postpaid $2.16.

The New Appreciation of the Bible By WILLARD C. SELLECK

This book seeks to do three things: first, to state briefly the principal conclusions of modern learning regarding the Bible; second, to show the enhanced values which it now exhibits; and third, to point out some of the ways in which it may be most helpfully used. 424 pages; 12mo, cloth; net $1.50, postpaid $1.63.

The Development of Western Civilization By J. DORSEY FORREST

An examination of modern European society which has in view the determining of the social forces by which it has been molded to its present form. 418 pages; 8vo, cloth; net $2.00, postpaid $2.17.

A Genetic History of the New England Theology By FRANK HUGH FOSTER

As the first genetic history of the greatest theological movement which America has yet seen, the book will command the attention of all students of our national thought. 580 pages; small 8vo, cloth; net $2.00, postpaid $2.17.

Homeric Vocabularies By EDGAR J. GOODSPEED and WILLIAM B. OWEN

This little book is planned to aid the reader of Homer in the rapid acquiring of a vocabulary. The words are arranged in the order of their frequency, a method which has proved remarkably successful in practice. 70 pages; small 8vo, paper; net $0.50, postpaid $0.53.

Egyptian Antiquities in the Pier Collection Part I By GARRETT PIER

Mr. Pier's collection contains a number of unique specimens, and is known to experts throughout the world. The catalogue is luxuriously printed and bound, and profusely illustrated. 48 pages; quarto; net $4.00, postpaid $4.15.

Index Volume to Breasted's Ancient Records of Egypt

An elaborate index to the collection will shortly be published as a separate volume. A most important work will thus be completed. It will now be possible for any reader of English to have access to the entire body of Egyptian historical inscriptions. 200 pages; 8vo; net $2.00

Animal Micrology: Practical Exercises in Microscopical Methods By MICHAEL F. GUYER

An indispensable book for teacher, physician, student, or novice who wishes to learn how to prepare his own material for microscopical examination. Sufficient account of the theoretical side of microscopy is given to enable the student to get satisfactory results from his microscope. 250 pages; 8vo, cloth; net $1.75, postpaid $1.88.

Hebrew Life and Thought By LOUISE SEYMOUR HOUGHTON

The reader of the Bible who wishes to be well informed, and who yet finds little to attract him in accounts of scientific investigations, will do well to read this book. Enriched with the fruits of a lifetime of study and versed in the intricacies of modern criticism, the author approaches her subject with a depth of feeling that reminds one of the best religious writers of the past. 396 pages; 12mo, cloth; net $1.50, postpaid $1.65.

A Short History of Christianity in the Apostolic Age By GEORGE H. GILBERT

This new textbook belongs to the series of "Constructive Bible Studies." It is intended for pupils of sixteen or seventeen years of age. Like the other volumes of the series it aims to embody the results of modern scholarship, while remaining true to the spirit of its great theme. 246 pages; 8vo; postpaid $1.00.

BETTINA

By

Eleanor Hoyt Brainerd

Author of "Concerning Belinda," "The Misdemeanors of Nancy," etc.

If a man is standing at the ferry and is suddenly greeted by a charming girl he has never met and told to run for the boat with her, is it fair to expect that he should sternly undeceive the young lady who has mistaken him for an expected chum of her brother? A delightfully humorous tale. Illustrated by Will Grefé. $1.25.

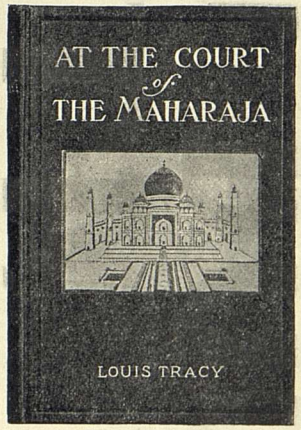
AT THE COURT OF THE MAHARAJA

By LOUIS TRACY

Author of "Pillar of Light" and "The Wings of the Morning."



As a writer of romantic fiction, Louis Tracy has few equals either in this country or abroad. This story, which is one of his best, has its scene laid in one of the numerous native states which go to make up King Edward's Indian empire. The plot is an ingenious one, and there are many strong situations.
